How to freeze your cake

Many couples make a tradition out of freezing their wedding cake for a year and eating it on their one-year anniversary. It is considered good luck and an omen for long life together to preserve the top tier of your wedding cake to eat on your first anniversary.

This is a very simple task to accomplish. Ask a responsible person to take the top layer home. First, this layer should be placed into the freezer immediately to harden the icing. In one to two hours, the cake should be frozen. The cake should then be loosely wrapped in plastic several times and placed into a cake box. The cake box should also be wrapped in plastic, and then placed into the freezer. This will preserve the taste and texture of the cake.

A word of caution: never keep the wedding cake in a frost-free freezer, because the constant defrosting will draw the moisture out of the cake. If you are moving within the year, leave the cake with a family member or friend's freezer after the wedding to avoid moving the cake before your anniversary. When you are prepared to eat your cake on your anniversary, remove the cake from the freezer and thaw in the refrigerator for 48 hours, then place at room temperature for 2 to 3 hours. Your cake will be as beautiful (and tasty) as the day of your wedding!

Flowers

A bride's bouquet is a centerpiece of a wedding. But there is so much more than just a bouquet. Learn more about your options and what's most popular in floral design. Check to see if your local Safeway might be able to your needs; they do weddings, too!

Finding your perfect flowers

Searching out exotic foliage, natural elements and unusual textures to harmonize with the poetic beauty of flowers, premier European floral artist Jane Packer creates impeccable designs that generate international acclaim, catching the eye of British Royalty and the celebrity strata. The Duke and Dutchess of York is just one of the famous weddings Jane designed flowers for.

Your wedding flowers wish

Before your first meeting with your florist, make a list of every type of flower you love, the color scheme you envision, and every floral need that might arise. Then think about how you'd like to work those floral favorites into your bouquets, boutonnieres, corsages, altar flowers and centerpieces.
